

Media Questions

- How has writing this book changed your perception of death?
- We all know we will die, why is it so hard to talk about it?
- Have you imagined the way you would like to die? Does that say anything about how you chose to live?
- What has being close to a death taught you about living?
- Has the loss of the tight family unit that existed prior to the 1970s made the death process more difficult to deal with?
- What can you do if you cannot say goodbye in person?
- What are some helpful things you can do in the presence of a dying person?
- How do you think Baby Boomers will handle death since they have been so resistant to the aging process?
- You write, “Let go of life in the sweetest way you know how.” How do you do that?
- Tell us about the “bursts of inspiration” which came to you as you went through the journey with your father.